THE NEED FOR AUTOMATIC FIRE PROTECTION

THE PROBLEM: Most of today's truck vehicles with all the modern conveniences include safety features such as anti-lock brakes, airbags, seatbelts, HVAC systems, AVL tracking systems, etc. In spite of all the additional safety features, modern fleet motor vehicles still lack basic automatic on-board fire suppression protection.

Industrial, municipal, and commercial vehicles are plagued with potential fire hazards. Therefore, the danger of fire is constant. Since all vehicles carry a combination of highly combustible fluids including fuel, oils, grease, lubricants, hydraulic fluids, and ignition sources such as turbochargers, exhaust manifolds, electrical circuits, and batteries – fire can start quickly.

COMMON VEHICLE FIRE HAZARD AREAS INCLUDE:

Engine Compartment • Electrical Cabinet • Coolant Heater Compartment • Particulate Trap Area
Cargo Area • Generator Area • Refrigeration Unit • AC Condenser • Hydraulic Pump • Battery Box
